

Table of contents

Introduction to DISC personality type: online report

- How to read and use this report

Section 1: Understanding DISC, in general

- Behavioral type overview
- Importance of each type

Section 2: Understanding your DISC type

- Your type of overview
- Your behavioral pattern according to the type
- Your motivating factors
- Potential areas of improvement
- A list of Job families that suit your type
- Summary of your type

DISC personality assessment test

DISC model, an adaptation of the DISC framework, highlights four key behavioral styles: Decisiveness, Impact, Support, and Certainty, critical for success in today's working landscape.

Introduction

Welcome to DISC Personality Assessment - a powerful tool that provides both recruiters and candidates with valuable insights into behavioral preferences and individual patterns. Whether you're a recruiter seeking to make informed hiring decisions or a candidate looking to understand yourself better, this report offers valuable information to aid your journey.

DISC model is a simple and universally applicable framework that focuses on observable behaviors, categorizing them into four styles: Decisiveness, Impact, Support and Certainty. This assessment will help you recognize your dominant style and gain a deeper understanding of your strengths and potential areas for growth.

Team conducted a thorough research journey to develop a robust and reliable DISC assessment. We explored a range of reputable sources, academic literature, and assessment portals to comprehensively understand the DISC model, its historical context, and its application in contemporary assessments. The research process involved reviewing relevant research articles, publications, and assessment materials from respected publishers in the field.

Throughout our research, we focused on understanding the origins of the DISC model, its evolution over time, and the different approaches and terminologies used by various publishers. One key figure in developing the DISC model was William Moulton Marston, an American psychologist known as the father of DISC. We studied Marston's original model and the subsequent work of Walter Clarke, who created the first DISC assessment in 1956.

Drawing from various research sources and expert knowledge, we have developed a comprehensive understanding of the DISC model and its practical application in assessments.

How to read this report

This report is divided into two parts, each providing unique insights to cater to both recruiters and candidates

Part I: Understanding the DISC Styles

This section introduces each of the four DISC styles, providing an overview of their behavioral tendencies. Recruiters can leverage this information to assess candidates' potential fit within specific roles and team dynamics. At the same time, candidates can gain valuable self-awareness and an understanding of their natural behavioral inclinations.

Part II: Understanding Yourself

Part II is all about you! We delve into your unique DISC style, revealing how it influences your communication style, decision-making, and approach to tasks. This section empowers recruiters and candidates to understand individual behavioral traits better.

As you explore this personalized report, you'll discover the power of self-awareness and gain valuable insights into your behavioral preferences. For recruiters, this report facilitates more informed hiring decisions, leading to the formation of cohesive and high-performing teams. Candidates can harness this knowledge to make career choices aligned with their natural strengths.

Please note: The behavioral descriptions mentioned in this report are tendencies for each style group and may or may not specifically apply to individuals personally. As a tool for self-awareness and decision-making, this assessment offers valuable insights that can be applied in various aspects of personal and professional life.

Now, let's embark on this journey together as we explore the two parts of the report to understand behavioral patterns better and unleash each individual's potential. With DISC Personality Assessment, you'll gain the knowledge to make purposeful choices and foster meaningful connections in your personal and professional spheres.

Section 1: Understanding DISC in General

Behavioral Type Overview:

The DISC Personality Assessment Test is a tool that reveals behavioral tendencies and communication styles. It categorizes personalities into four types: Decisiveness, Impact, Support, and Certainty.

Behavioral Types:

Decisiveness (D)	Impact (I)
- Assertive, goal-oriented - Leaders, risk-takers - Direct communication, results-focused - Impatient may need to pay more attention to details	- Outgoing, persuasive - Social, relationship builders - Effective communicators, motivators - Easily distracted, seeks recognition
Support (S)	Certainty (C)
- Cooperative, empathetic - Team players, listeners - Values harmony, reliable - They avoid confrontation and may not assert themselves	- Analytical, detail-oriented - Logical, systematic - Consistent, fact-driven - May be overly critical, need certainty

In summary, DISC's four personality types provide insights into behavior. People are a mix of these types, influencing their interactions and teamwork. Recognizing these types enhances communication and collaboration.

Recognizing the Value of Each DISC Type:

Each of the four DISC personality types brings unique strengths and attributes to team dynamics, communication styles, and work environments. Understanding the significance of each class is crucial for fostering effective collaboration and maximizing individual and collective potential.

Decisiveness (D)	Impact (I)
• Leadership and Drive: Individuals with a Decisiveness type are natural leaders who drive projects forward with determination and assertiveness. • Initiative: They lead in challenging situations and readily make decisions, enhancing team progress. • Results-Oriented: Their focus on outcomes boosts productivity and efficiency within the team. • Action: They infuse a sense of urgency into tasks, motivating the team to achieve goals.	• Communication: Impact-oriented individuals excel in connecting with others and conveying ideas persuasively. • Relationship Building: They create positive and engaging environments, fostering strong team cohesion. • Motivation: Their enthusiasm and energy uplift team morale and inspire colleagues to perform their best. • Adaptability: They inject creativity and flexibility into the team, making it adaptable to various situations.
Support (S)	Certainty (C)
• Collaboration: Support-focused individuals are excellent team players who value cooperation and harmony. • Empathy: Their understanding and empathy enhance communication, resolving conflicts smoothly. • Reliability: They provide stability to the team, consistently delivering and fulfilling commitments. • Listener: Their active listening skills promote effective communication and understanding among team members.	• Detail-Oriented: Certainty types ensure accuracy and precision in tasks, minimizing errors. • Organization: They bring structure to the team, aiding in efficient planning and execution. • Problem Solving: Their analytical approach helps resolve challenges and improve decision-making. • Quality: Their pursuit of excellence elevates the overall quality of work produced by the team.

DISC - Personality Summary

Decisiveness 66.7%

Impact 60.17%

Support 65.19%

Certainty 57.25%

Personality type and Attributes

1. Decisiveness 66.7%

Your moderate Decisiveness score reveals a balanced approach between assertiveness and accommodation. You are adaptable and can assert yourself when necessary while considering others' perspectives. Your determination is tempered with flexibility, allowing you to navigate changing circumstances. Embrace your flexible nature and leverage your drive to succeed while maintaining a collaborative and empathetic approach.

Motivating Factors

- Balancing personal aspirations with collaborative efforts.
- Seeking a sense of accomplishment and progress in tasks and projects.
- Valuing opportunities for both personal growth and team achievements.

Potential Areas of Improvement

- Maintaining focus and determination in pursuing goals without becoming overly rigid.
- Striving to balance personal ambition and being receptive to team input.
- Embracing flexibility to adapt to changing circumstances and avoid frustration.

Job families that suit according to the level achieved by the personality type

- Team-based roles in fields like Human Resources or Customer Service.
- Collaborative positions in Education or Social Work.
- Business Analysis and Consulting roles that involve balancing individual goals with team objectives.

Type	Interpretation
Assertiveness	"You strike a balance between being assertive and accommodating. You can assert yourself when necessary while still considering others' perspectives."
Determination	You possess a balanced level of determination, adaptable to changing circumstances while maintaining your drive.
Results-oriented	You maintain a balance between process, and results. While you aim for achievements, you also value the journey and collaborative efforts.

2. Impact 60.17%

Your moderate Impact score shows a balanced appreciation for social interactions and personal space. You are comfortable in social settings and can initiate conversations but also value quieter moments and introspection. Embrace your adaptable social skills and use your influence to create meaningful connections while respecting the need for personal reflection.

Motivating Factors

- Balancing sociability with moments of reflection and personal space.
- Finding motivation in both collaborative projects and independent pursuits.
- Seeking to inspire and influence others through meaningful connections.

Potential Areas of Improvement

- Finding ways to maintain genuine connections while respecting personal boundaries.
- Striving to influence through empathy and understanding rather than persuasion alone.
- Developing the ability to engage with different personality types effectively.

Job families that suit according to the level achieved by the personality type

- Teaching or Training positions that require both social skills and introspection.
- Counseling or Coaching roles that involve inspiring and guiding others.
- Team-based positions in Human Resources or Employee Relations.

Type	Interpretation
Social	You enjoy social interactions but also value personal space and introspection. Your sociability adapts to various situations.
Outgoing	You are comfortable in social settings and can initiate conversations, yet you appreciate quieter moments too.
Persuasiveness	You can effectively communicate your ideas and opinions, balancing persuasion with receptiveness to others' viewpoints.

3. Support 65.19%

Your moderate Support score demonstrates a balanced approach between cooperation and self-reliance. You understand the importance of teamwork while recognizing the value of individual contributions. Embrace your ability to balance collaboration with autonomy and leverage your support to build a strong sense of unity within your team.

Motivating Factors

- Balancing teamwork with opportunities for individual contributions.
- Finding motivation in both supporting others and achieving personal goals.
- Seeking a sense of belonging and camaraderie within the team.

Potential Areas of Improvement

- Striking a balance between offering support and allowing others to find solutions independently.
- Recognizing personal limits in supporting others and avoiding burnout.
- Fostering open communication to express support and concerns effectively.

Job families that suit according to the level achieved by the personality type

- Administrative positions that require both supportiveness and adaptability.
- Teaching or Training roles that involve fostering teamwork and cooperation.
- Collaborative positions in Event Planning or Project Coordination.

Type	Interpretation
Cooperativeness	You strike a balance between being cooperative and self-reliant, understanding when to collaborate and when to work independently.
Patience	You demonstrate patience but are also capable of addressing urgent matters promptly.
Team-oriented	You value teamwork and individual contributions equally, recognizing the importance of both.

4. Certainty 57.25%

Your moderate Certainty score strikes a balance between analytical thinking and intuition. You consider detailed analysis and broader perspectives, making informed decisions while embracing adaptability. Embrace your ability to combine research with intuition and leverage your clarity to find innovative solutions that draw upon rationality and creativity. Your adaptability allows you to respond effectively to diverse situations.

Motivating Factors

- Balancing analytical thinking with creative and intuitive approaches.
- Seeking to make informed decisions while remaining open to new ideas.
- Finding motivation in both detailed analysis and broader perspectives.

Potential Areas of Improvement

- Striving to maintain focus on details without becoming overly perfectionistic.
- Embracing systematic thinking to enhance organization and decision-making.
- Recognizing the value of both analytical and intuitive thinking in problem-solving.

Job families that suit according to the level achieved by the personality type

- Teaching or Training positions that involve both analytical and intuitive thinking.
- Research-based roles in Social Sciences or Environmental Studies.
- Organizational positions that require balancing detailed planning with flexibility.

Type	Interpretation
Analytical	You balance analytical thinking with intuition, considering both detailed analysis and broader perspectives.
Detail-oriented	You demonstrate attention to detail while also recognizing the importance of efficiency in completing tasks.
Systematic	You balance systematic thinking with adaptability, recognizing when to follow a plan and when to embrace flexibility.

Disclaimer and Further Information:

The DISC Personality Assessment is a valuable tool for gaining insights into behavioral patterns and preferences. However, it's important to note that the assessment does not provide an absolute measure of personality or abilities. Instead, it offers a nuanced perspective on your behavioral tendencies based on your responses.

- Navigating the Information in this Report: The information presented in this report reflects your unique responses during the assessment. It's intended to assist you in your personal development journey and enhance your self-awareness. This report should not be considered an all-encompassing representation of your entire personality or skill set.
- Harnessing the Power of Self-Development: Embracing your DISC assessment results can empower you to make informed decisions about your interactions, communication style, and personal growth. By recognizing your behavioral inclinations, you can work towards refining your strengths and addressing areas that might benefit from further development.
- Seeking Further Guidance: For a more comprehensive understanding of your DISC type and how to effectively utilize the insights from this report, we encourage you to reach out to our dedicated assessment team. They are available to provide additional information, answer your questions, and guide you in leveraging your assessment outcomes to your advantage.

Remember, the DISC Personality Assessment is a valuable resource on your journey towards self-improvement, and our team is here to support you every step of the way.